Products & Materials

Like any good investment, Article products are built to last. We use a variety of materials engineered for indoor and outdoor use — including a host of beautiful natural materials — to give our designs the versatility and quality your clients expect.

Some important things to know about our materials:

Wood

Like all organic materials, wood is impacted by the weather. Rain, snow, wind, sunshine, and the temperature will all affect wood — just like in nature. Wooden outdoor products may develop cracks or fissures over time. This is a reality of solid wood that's exposed to temperature and moisture changes. To help prevent cracking, wooden pieces dry, covered, and guarded from extreme heat or cold as much as possible.

Some wooden patio furniture may develop a silver or gray color — that's just the furniture aging gracefully. Over time, wooden outdoor furniture, particularly designs made with teak or acacia, will show signs of aging and develop a beautiful silver patina. This is 100% natural and not to be feared.

Marble

Marble is a very absorbent stone, and while a sealant has been added to our marble products to resist staining, any spills must be soaked up immediately with a clean absorbent cloth or paper towel.

Sofas

The old maxim is that the kitchen is the heart of the home. We say it's the sofa. Besides being a major part of daily life, sofas are also a major aesthetic statement. It should provide comfortable seating for your client, but also look amazing. We can help you get the best of both worlds.

Lighting

If a room is beautifully designed but you can't see it, does it even exist? Not to get too existential, but it's hard to appreciate a space that isn't well lit.

The solution? Add mid-century lighting with a sculptural touch with floor lamps and table lamps, or take things off the ground with clever sconces and ceiling lights. They take up zero square footage and give you the perfect amount of light for reading, eating dinner, existing, and appreciating.
